Since I haven't had the time to write my customary 'novels'/articles I thought I might take this opportunity to give an example of why Cleveland's rookie QB, Brandon Weeden, is tied for the league lead in interceptions. Some may read this and think it is an attack or a pile on to Weeden when his team is 0-5, but I think of it as more of an example of the type of growth and improvement needed in order for the young QB to lead this group of puppies into full blown Dawg-hood.

The photo below is a snapshot of the play that turned the course of the game against the Giants. Sure there were many plays that shaped the outcome but this was a huge momentum swing as the Browns were driving with a 17-10 lead…..they were on the Giants 25 yard line and they had a very manageable 3rd down and 1 to convert in order to continue the drive and, of course, they were already in range for Fabulous Phil Dawson.

[redacted]