The Big Ten is down to its last two weeks of action, and the contenders for the conference title game have been whittled down to three. Wisconsin will represent the Leaders Division in Indianapolis on December 1st, a spot they clinched with Saturday's win at Indiana. The Legends participant may not be determined until the final week of the season, but either Nebraska or Michigan will be playing the Badgers for the championship.

The Cornhuskers hold the tiebreaker over Michigan, and they appear to have the easier path to Indy, with remaining games against Minnesota in Lincoln and at Iowa. Michigan hosts Iowa this weekend and then travels to Columbus on the 24th. Here's a rundown of last Saturday's games:

Wisconsin 62 - Indiana 14

Box Score and Stats

Box Score and Stats

Box Score and Stats

Box Score and Stats

Dan's OSU [illegible] Resources [illegible] here [illegible] The Big