Written by {ga=davidregimbal} Sunday, February 13 2011 9:00 AM

After losing 71-67 to Wisconsin on the road Saturday afternoon, the previously top ranked Buckeyes fell to the No. 3 spot in this week's Coaches Poll. The Buckeyes were hopped by once beaten Kansas and a three loss Texas team in the ESPN/USA Today Coaches poll. The AP poll, which I assume is backed more by common sense, has Ohio State at the No. 2 spot behind Kansas and ahead of Texas.

The drop was expected after Ohio State's trip to Madison produced Ohio State's only loss of the season. A hostile trip turned disrespectful when fans stormed the court after Wisconsin's victory when Jared Sullinger was spat on by a Badger fan. After Wisconsin's football team gave the Ohio State squad its only loss of the season, it's hard to feel anything but hate for stupid Wisconsin and their stupid fans, their stupid football team, their stupid basketball team, their stupid coaches, their stupid mascot, their stupid band, their stupid state, their stupid economy, their stupid Governer Scott Walker, their stupid mass production of cheese, the stupid lake serving as a border connecting them to stupid Michigan, their stupid state motto 'Forward', their stupid state population of 5,654,774 according to a 2009 estimate, their stupid state fossil "Trilobite" and their stupid law prohibiting people from throwing rocks at train-cars.